

A Womans Civil War: A Diary, with Reminiscences of the War, from March 1862

Cornelia Peake McDonalds story of the Civil War records a personal and distinctly female battle: a southern womans lonely struggle in the midst of chaos to provide safety and shelter for herself and her nine children as their home is destroyed by the forces of war. Whether describing a Union soldiers theft of her Christmas cakes, the discovery of a human foot in her garden, or the death of her daughter, her story of the Civil War at home is compelling and disturbing. Her tremendous determination and unyielding spirit is a testimony to a womans will to preserve her family.
