

Alone To Think: Thoughts About Our Failing Correctional And Criminal Systems And How To Fix Them

Alone to Think discusses the failures of our current judicial thinking and actions regarding criminals. Our present justice, correctional, and rehabilitation systems are broken as evidenced by the increasing recidivism rates and the continual increase in crime. Today's correctional facilities are often referred to as graduate schools for prisoners, who become stronger and wiser criminals upon their release into our communities. Our current systems rehabilitate almost no prisoners and do not correct criminal behavior. Alone to Think reviews the current problems and offers a workable solution to our correctional and rehabilitation systems.
