

BJJ: Blog Barf and Butterflies (Volume 1) (BJJ: Blog Barf Series)

What is this? Its regurgitation or maybe butterflies; it depends on your perception. It depends on how you see things. Ive been writing about Brazilian jiu-jitsu on the Tap or Die blog since 2009 and now its time to take down some older posts and instead of having them disappear forever, Ive decided to collect the butterflies, the thoughts that have come to my mind and then have floated off, things to think about. Okay, thats the artsy-fartsy side of my mind, the real part of me says its the blog barf that Ive been spewing for years and I just put it all together for anyone who wants to read it. Ive debated whether or not to put this together and while talking to a friend of mine, the topic of seminars came up. From that conversation Ive come up with an analogy. When we go to a seminar, especially if weve been going to them for years, we have usually been exposed to most of the techniques, but there is always something new we take away, something we didnt know or forgot or werent ready for, or missed the first time. That one thing we learn is always worth the cost of the seminar, at least in my mind. So yes, this book is barf; its butterflies and BJJ, but hopefully its something to think about, maybe something new to take away or something we didnt know or forgot or werent ready for or missed the first time.
