Not illustrated. 1791 edition. Excerpt: ... they promote the interest of individuals. There are several hills in this parish, which, being viewed from the plains below, add much to the grandeur and variety of the prospect. Several of these hills are covered With sir plantations, which cannot fail to please the eye, as, the hill above Fowlis, the hill of Swordie, and some others, Knockmartin, a small hill, compared to the rest, is situated on the east side of the hill of Swordle, and is seen from the sea side. Its chief beauty consists in its sljape, it tapers gradually from the base to the. highest point, forming a cone. This last mentioned, as well as the higher hills beyond it, are covered with heath. But the most distinguished hill in the parish is Ben-uaish, which towers above all the rest; and must be extremely high, as it is seen in Moray and Banffshire. Ben-uaish is always covered with snow; even in th hottest day in summer. And, in allusion to this, there is a remarkable clause inserted in one of the charters of the family of Fowlis, which is, that the forest of Uaish is held of the King on condition of paying a snow-ball to his Majesty on any day of the year, if required. And we are assured that a quantity of snow was actually sent to the Duke of Cumberland, when at Inverness, in 1746, to cool his wine. There is a great deal of heath and coarse grass, which is excellent pasture for cattle, all around this hill; and the forest is well stocked with deer, and a variety of moor game. Airy Climate, and Disnases.--The air is generally clear and pure; and it has been observed, in this, as well as. the neighbouring parishes, that the weather has been more changeable for twenty years past than in former times. That rain has fallen of late years in a greater proportion...
