

Looking Back: Stories of Hunting, Fishing, Family, and Faith

From nearly dying while hunting for mountain goats in British Columbia to teaching his son how to track a deer, Clint Ward shares his stories of how the outdoors have shaped him as a man and taught him what's really important in life. These easy-to-read stories enable the reader to experience the incredible beauty of God's creation, the challenge of a big hunt, and the fulfillment found in the family bond. Nature serves as Ward's classroom, teaching him to depend on his faith in desperate situations as well as in the quiet moments. His vivid descriptions of battling extreme conditions allow the reader to experience the physical, mental, and emotional challenges of the wilderness hunt. His humor, family interactions, and chance encounters set the stage for learning life's lessons.
