

Juliana, a girl from the Andes (English and Spanish Edition)

A very common untold story! Several factors are important when discussing girls access to education in rural Andes: parents objections, teachers with stereotyped expectations of gender roles, an educational system that silences their voices and restrictive socio-cultural norms. Girls face unfriendly school environments that are obstacles to their learning process and to their chances of completing school. In spite of that, girls like Juliana are determined to break the oppressive poverty cycle, to search for different life opportunities and to become active members of society. This story describes traditions and challenges that play into rural Andean girls lives. Beatriz Alvarado is a cultural consultant and educational researcher; founder and executive director of Killari (www.killari.org), a non-profit organization aimed to empower rural Andean young women to achieve social and financial change by accessing to tertiary education. Una historia comun no contada Existen factores importantes cuando se discute el acceso a la educacion de las ninas rurales andinas: objeciones de los padres, maestros con visiones estereotipadas de genero, un sistema educativo que silencia sus voces y normas socio-culturales restrictivas. Las ninas enfrentan ambientes educativos adversos a su aprendizaje y a sus posibilidades de concluir la escuela. Sin embargo, ninas como Juliana tienen la determinacion de romper el ciclo de pobreza, buscar diferentes oportunidades en sus vidas y convertirse en miembros activos de la sociedad. Esta historia describe las tradiciones y los retos presentes en las vidas de las ninas rurales andinas.
