

Historical Overview of the National Womans Party

The origins of the National Womans Party (NWP) date from December 1912, when Alice Paul (1885-1977) and Lucy Burns (1879-1966) were appointed to the National American Woman Suffrage Associations (NAWSA) languishing Congressional Committee. Paul and Burns were young, well-educated Americans who worked with Emmeline and Christabel Pankhurst in the militant wing of the British suffrage movement. Radicalized by their experiences in England which included violent confrontations with authorities, jail sentences, hunger strikes, and force-feedings they sought to inject a renewed militancy into the American campaign. They also endeavored to shift NAWSAs attention away from winning voting rights for women at the state and local levels to securing an amendment to the U.S. Constitution to enfranchise women nationally.
