

Frederic Bastiat on Declaration of War against the Professors of Political Economy (Illustrated)

The book has an active table of contents for easy access to each chapter. Frederic Bastiat was a French political economist, statesman, classical liberal theorist, and the French Assembly. He coined the important economic concept of opportunity cost. His ideas have become the foundation for libertarian and the Austrian schools of thought. Most of Bastiat's political writings were done during the years just before and immediately after the Revolution of February 1848 when France was rapidly turning to complete socialism. As a Deputy to the Legislative Assembly, Bastiat explained each socialist fallacy as it appeared and how socialism must inevitably degenerate into communism that it must fail. Bastiat was not only a firm support of free trade but also a deep thinker of free trade system from the perspectives of economics, law, communism, and education. In this essay, Declaration of War against the Professors of Political Economy, Mr. Bastiat advocated freedom of teaching and education as All right, since there are two conflicting doctrines in the world, one bearing the motto: Allow trade, and the other: Prevent trade, for heavens sake, keep the balance equal and have both doctrines professed. See to it that our variety of political economy is also taught. Bastiat's reasoning still remains as relevant today as it was then. This essay is one of the most important essays about the deepest thoughts about free trade and open education by Frederic Bastiat, one of the greatest thinkers of political economics on the planet. The Essay is already read more than a hundred years and it will still be read for another century due to its truths.
