

Better Than All Right

The darker the truth, the deeper you hide it but what happens when you cant hide anymore? Innocence, I guess, is not my image. Sixteen-year-old Iris knows that between her bohemian playwright father who lives off the grid in the New Mexican desert and her mother, to whom getting married (but not staying married) is a full-time job, shes led an unorthodox life, which hasnt left with her with a lot of childhood illusions. So its no surprise when her mom sends her to spend the summer with her aunt, uncle, and cousin. Iris younger cousin Caryn is different. Shes only fourteen, and much more sheltered. Aunt Elaine hopes that Iris will be good company for Caryn, and when the girls meet an appealing young man at the pool and all three become friends, it seems her plan just might be working. But for Iris, making things work means keeping secrets from Caryn. If Iris cant pretend to be someone she isnt all summer long, will she still be all right?
